

PLANNED COMMUNITIES AND CONDOMINIUMS

Real Estate Lawyers Assisting Clients Throughout Pennsylvania and New Jersey

Planned Community and Condominium form of ownership is among one of many aspects of real estate development in which Kaplin Stewart lawyers are experienced. Separate and aside from acquisition, financing, permitting and conveyance, form of ownership is a critical step in development and management of a real estate project. Often the permitting process dictates the form of ownership.

Kaplin Stewart guides its client in all areas related to condominiums and planned communities, from development, to fruition, to transition. Our lawyers can integrate their knowledge of the planning process and ownership structure, ranging from small residential townhouse planned to communities to urban skyscrapers to master planned communities. Our lawyers have helped establish mixed-use planned communities, office and commercial condominiums, resort and recreation communities, and active adult communities. Kaplin Stewart has represented many developers through ground up construction, as well as commercial and residential conversion.

Regardless of the Size or Complexity of Your Transaction, Condominiums and Planned Communities, the Attorneys at Kaplin Stewart are Capable of Handling the Matter
